The initiative was taken last year by the North Sandwich school, which exhibited samples of school exercises, sewing, mending, canned fruits and vegetables, jellies, cooked food and garden products, all done by the pupils. This year that school, and five others competed. If more definite arrangements could be made for next year's exhibits some time in advance it would furnish the children with an excellent incentive to do more and better work of various kinds at school and at home.

One of the most praiseworthy exhibits was that of Maurice Pierce, the twelve-year old son of James Pierce, who had a garden of his own and among other things raised and exhibited pumpkins, melons, peppers, celery, and peanuts.

A buff wheel is useful for work of this kind. Another formula for a powder to rub into scratches is 80 parts powdered chalk, 30 parts tripoli and 15 parts bole; wet the surface of the article slightly, then rub with linen cloth dipped in this powder.

Mrs. Delphia Perry, Plymouth St., Meredith, says: "I suffered with backache for a number of years, and I don't know what the trouble was. There was a dull constant ache in the small of my back and often sharp pains were caused through the nerve. My kidneys acted too freely. I heard of Dr. F. C. Among the significant motives which were hanging on the walls of the Convention Church at Plymouth last week, was the following: "God's causes are never destroyed by blows, but by being stung upon." (God, Adam Smith).
At a very interesting service Sunday evening, the friends who attended the State Sunday School Convention at Plymouth, held their impressions and shared with us all the many good things they heard and saw. Many fine things were heard and seen. The superintendent as disclosed by the principal, taught at the Convention.
The boys and girls of the Church League are about to start an interesting course in connection with their studies. The Pastor, Mr. H. H. Hammond, as his chief source of material, the Pastor is interested in young people to some of the personal. The friends of the League are distinguished themselves by noble, self-sacrificing work for their race. The first talk will be given on Sunday evening and it is hoped that every member of the League will be present.
Twenty-seven hungry people of the fine supper provided for the Misses Bible Class at the regular monthly meeting of the Church League was served at 6 o'clock, a real old-fashioned supper of beans, brown bread, pumpkin and apple pie, sugared doughnuts, coffee. The vestry looked very cozy and pleasant. The chairs drawn into a circle, and the members of the League, and president, Mr. Dearborn, clearly and called the class to order, a business meeting was called to order. The evening was taken up with a fine description of their Washington trip, by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robinson.

This road is full of bumps and much speed can be made. It is thought that the roughness of the road may have shaken the steering wheel from the control of the driver.

It is the richest source of gold in the world today. So far, no one has been able to explain the Arabian part of Ophir and so came to be called "gold of Ophir." Very extensive ruins of great buildings and some of the few great granitic blocks exist near Victoria and are said to be of alien and temple and workshops of alien (perhaps Phoenician) origin. The ruins extend to a port on the Indian ocean, believed to be now Portuguese East Africa, and were rapidly added to the peninsula's recognized position of the most lightened group of South Africa. ## IT HAPPENED IN NEW ENGLAND News of General Interest From the Six States

The annual friendship social, under the auspices of the Faithful Workers of the Kings Daughters, Arlington, Mass., was held in the parish parlors of the New Jerusalem church. The guests ranged in age from 70 to 90, and included a number of well-known people of the town.

A temporary injunction restraining the three selectmen of Harpswell, Me., from proceeding further on plans for a bridge between Orrs and Hallsays Is. and has been issued by Associate Justice Leere B. Deasy of supreme judicial court. Cause for denial of petition for a permanent injunction will be given a hearing in November.

Chief of Police Irving S. Watts, of Portland, announced that starting Nov. 1, the curfew law will be enforced strictly in Portland. This action follows the recent appearance in court of a large number of juveniles cases and the presence on the street late at night of children of both sexes, police officials said.

Construction has been started by the government on a motor road to the summit of Cadillac mountain, Me., formerly Green mountain, in Lafayette National Park, the highest point on the Atlantic coast. The construction now contemplated will cover over 4000 feet in length, bringing the road to an elevation of 519 feet above sea level.

Portland is again to be represented in the United States naval reserve. Reorganization of the unit of this force is in progress, and 16 men have been signed as a nucleus for a division of 30 members. Lt. Maurice B. Durgin, senior officer of the old reserve, is to command the new unit, and other officers are Lt. S. J. Marks, A. L. King and Thomas A. Lee.

Out of a three-cornered contest, the first in 47 years for the nomination for governors of Rhode Island in a Republican state convention, Lt. Gov. Harold J. Gross emerged a victor. On the second ballot he received a majority over Congressman Ambrose Kennedy and Gov. Emory J. San Souci. Former Gov. R. Livingston, a man of Newport was nominated for United States senator.

Loving her as though she were his own little granddaughter, Willard W. Fretz of Fresno, Cal., Northbridge, Mass., a farmer, bequeathed his entire estate to Talmor M. Fuller, a student of the law, making her the richest little girl in Northbridge. His estate amounts to $75,000 or $100,000. Since she was a baby Talmor lived in the Fretz home. Her grandfather, a housekeeper there.

Another foal of the deer hunting mania has been taken with the arrest of Charles A. Hoak of Harrisburg, Pa., for the accidental shooting of Dr. Lee H. B. Maynard of Philadelphia in a public place near Spass Park. Hoak waived examination on a charge of negligence, and was held in lieu of $10,000. He was held in lieu of $10,000. He was held in lieu of $10,000.

Edward P. Tuttle, vice-president of the National Association of Criminal Men, speaking at the monthly dinner of the Boston association, urged cooperation of the membership with the efforts of officers and members of the Boston Bar Association to purge the bar of lawyers who show the way to defend legitimate business men out of large sums of money through bankruptcy. In support of his contention he cited a case in an adjoining state where a retail shoe dealer, after obtaining $20,000 worth of shoes, had the goods conveyed to a warehouse in another state.

Gov. Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts has issued a statement to the people of Massachusetts, urging them to vote larger quantities of locally grown farm products. "It has been brought to my attention," he says, "that some organizations in western states are making a special attempt this year to place their agricultural products in eastern markets. Recently the mayors of many Massachusetts cities were requested to urge the public to purchase in large quantities for storage potatoes raised in remote places instead of using those grown locally. However well intentioned the efforts of our western friends may be from their own point of view, their proposal so vitally concerns our own Massachusetts citizens that the mayors who refused to support such a program are to be commended."

The will of Mrs. Allen Tobey Jones of Wareham, Mass., recovered for filing in the Plymouth county registry of probate, disposes of an estate estimated at $3,000,000. Eventually nearly $1,000,000 will go to the Bide-a-Wee Home Association, Inc., of New York; more than $500,000 will go to the Massachusetts society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and a similar amount will transform the Tobey home into a hospital. Most of the estate at present, however, will be devoted to bequests in trust.

Hopeless.

She was a pretty young thing and terribly in earnest when she applied for a staff position on a Chicago paper. A woman reporter, emissary from the city editor, carried the usual message. "No vacancies."

"Well," she sighed, "I don't wish the women on the newspaper any harm, but I wish some of them would get up and give the rest of us a chance."

"They don't though," the woman reporter assured her cheerfully. "Even when they get married they hold on to their jobs rather than give up."

The youthful applicant regarded her speculatively. "And they live a long time, too, don't they?" she concluded.

The Better Plan.

Forest Station Established.

So marked has been the destruction of the timber lands in the southern Appalachian region that the Department of Agriculture has established a new forest experiment station at Asheville, N. C., to determine methods of conservation and control, says the Scientific American. This station is the first of its kind in the eastern states. A further object of the establishment is to secure information for forests regarding the handling of southern trees.

First Steam Transatlantic Trips.
The American vessel Savannah crossed the Atlantic from Savannah, Ga., to Liverpool, England, in 11 hours. The trip was made under steam but mainly by sail. In 1838 the Royal William, of 800 tons, built in Canada, made the first transatlantic voyage entirely under steam.

Warned by Experience.

"Mum-and-Miller Johnson" remembered young Sankey Spink. "I want to run-mum-my daughter, Zuzu-mum. I'm not good enough for her, but—"

"You're dead safe in telling that to me!" interrupted Jack Johnson of Bangor, Maine, Art. "Just don't let her maw hear you say it. When I was courting the girl that is my present wife I told her mother that I wasn't good enough for her daughter, and I'd give it to her. She believed me, and she has been a-momenting it ever since"—Kansas City Star.

Stimulating Values of Colors.
French experimenters tested the strength of the hindlip under colored lights, and found red was distinctly the most stimulating color, the revealing colors falling in the order: Orange, yellow, green and blue.

MEREDITH'S PAST

to keeping house on the hill back of the Dick Neal farm. He owned what is now the plains above the cemetery. Just how large a farm he had is not known, but he took good care of 15 children as fast as they came along. Associated with him were Francis Hawkins, who lived on the opposite hillside, who owned and operated the mill that was on the street and separated their farms. This mill was run up and down the hill and was a big mill into boards and timber. They run this mill when there was water and worked their farms and the village carpentering, the balance of the time.

After Cran got old he moved off the farm into the village in the house now owned by Wilbur Emery. After while he moved to the Edward Heath house and had a shop in the rear where he did small jobs and made shoes by hand for G. H. Clark & Co. He was an honest, straight man, but very stern in his manner. A great reader of the bible. This was his life in all his dealings and men respected him.

Hawkins worked in the village as a carpenter as long as he lived, walking back and forth each day to the village. We are now near the town limits, but I think Oren and Prescott Jeness were in Meredith.

In these old days there used to be quite a lot of fun at spring election. One party or the other would elect Prescott Jeness in keeping, and his wife would be very anxious to know what he was. There he was, looking off and by watching her those interested generally knew where Prescott was.

Coming down the east side of Plymouth street, we first have the cemetery, soon to be the resting place of many of us who are in the last stages of life's journey.

Close to the cemetery is the old Lane house, now the home of Mrs. Morrison. This house is a real old relic and would furnish considerable history if someone had the key.

The next building is the old bark mill where John Sawyer and his son George used to tan the bark that they used in tanning. Here they had a machine which would cut the green, wet hides. This process they called fulfilling them.

The next house is a new house built by Josiah Bartlett and is a hired house I think.

The old red house comes next. This house has always been rented and I know but little about it.

On top of the hill is the old Egger place. This man married the daughter of John Horn, the first settler who lived in this house. What his business was I do not remember. After he died it was a rental house for some years. Burnum lived here for years. He lived here when R. E. Pland's house burned down. They tell a story of his starting down the road in the morning with water pails in his hands, shouting "Fire!" meeting Mr. Elia who stopped him and told him the fire was out hours ago.

Nelson Trow afterwards bought this place and lived there until he died.

Next comes the old drug store. Of him I know but little except he was a large man and had a son named Charles. Afterwards this became the home of a man named Piper, who I think died there. After his death it became a rental house until Obadiah Piper bought it. Here he died and it is now a rental house.

Next place used to be the home of a family named Bryant. I do not remember much of them. It is now the property of Wm. Niles and family.

Next in order is the Robinson house. Here Uncle Nat and his wife lived and died. Jazel was a fine, honest man, a most excellent workman in wood, and for many years worked for J. A. Lang as a piano case maker. After Mr. Lang's death he went into the furniture business over the old carpenter store. As a side line he made row boats, which were in demand as they were fine boats. His boys are down country and I know nothing about them.

Next comes the old red school house. Here I went to school until I was about eleven years of age when I went to work, and for most six years I worked in the mill. Afterwards I came back to school and went two terms to Julia Wallace, who afterwards became a doctor in Concord. She is now dead. If a history of this old red school house could have been kept it would make mighty good reading. It is as much as a young boy's life was worth to face the school marm with her big stick, and at recess to go to the mill from the other part. At one time they could not let the two departments out together as the larger boys abused the smaller ones so much. Once Julia Wallace asked me to write a composition on the subject of a trip to San Francisco and back. (What a subject for a boy who had never been far out of Meredith!) I tackled the subject to a very little what I had written, but no one but the teacher knew who wrote it. She gave me great praise which swelled me up to large proportions. If I could feel the same over my efforts in these matters, it would be ample recompense, but it can be young but once.

I think that Aunt Sally Christie had her home in the next house. She was a character in Meredith, a good-natured woman, who paid but little heed to her language, saying anything that she thought of first. I asked her once what became of her husband. She answered that she did not know as she last time she saw him he was going down stairs with a kitchen chair on her head. Sally was a smart, hard-working woman and made herself a home.

Next is a new tenement house. Next is the house we know as the Choate house, now owned by Nate Morrison. This is an old relic of the property of Joseph Kirk.

Rede brothers who lived here once do not know of but one of the children that is still alive.

Mr. Morse came on the scene as his clerk. As he was a factor in the shoe trade very prominently in the history of the town, he is well known.

When I had the Prescott block up for completion, I forgot the fact that Albert Kilder was once a factor in the store where Nate Morrison now is. As boys he was in the store and was very friendly. As we grew up we went into the mill and he went on the train. He was a very good clerk for some time. When he left this job I lost track of him, but think that he was in Massachusetts for some time. He finally came back and opened a store in Meredith where he did a successful business until he died. He was a very wise and what he is now is the result of his own efforts and shows that a boy can do when he sets his wits and efforts in the right direction.

E. H. MALOON
Judge Sturtevant Named for Wentworth Vacancy
Governor Cox last Wednesday promoted Special Justice Malcom E. Sturtevant to be the judge of the Somerset District court, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Judge Wentworth.

The new judge has been an associate justice since 1918, when he was appointed by Governor McKim. He was born in Somerville, February 3, 1880, was educated in the Somerville public schools, and graduated from Tufts College in 1902 and Harvard Law School in 1905.

The writer came to the first planning board in Somerville and during the war was one of the members of the legal advisory board in that city. Judge Sturtevant has a summer home in Center Harbor which he occupies quite often.

Center Harbor
It is a well known fact that the old corner store in which the Post Office is located, has more than changed hands, this time Clarence Nichols being the lucky one to get the place.

The writer came to the first planning board in Somerville and during the war was one of the members of the legal advisory board in that city. Judge Sturtevant has a summer home in Center Harbor which he occupies quite often.

a line of goods for a country store and did a fair business. During his trading period in the year 1880 Frank H. Morse came on the scene as his clerk. As he was a factor in the shoe trade very prominently in the history of the town, he is well known.

When I had the Prescott block up for completion, I forgot the fact that Albert Kilder was once a factor in the store where Nate Morrison now is. As boys he was in the store and was very friendly. As we grew up we went into the mill and he went on the train. He was a very good clerk for some time. When he left this job I lost track of him, but think that he was in Massachusetts for some time. He finally came back and opened a store in Meredith where he did a successful business until he died. He was a very wise and what he is now is the result of his own efforts and shows that a boy can do when he sets his wits and efforts in the right direction.

In 1889 the firm bought the store building which belonged to the old Center House estate, remodeled and built large additions to the old store building and the firm of Morse & Stanley became widely known throughout this section of the country and seemed to crown their efforts in every direction.

Every fifteen years in business Stanley decided to retire. Mr. Morse took over the whole thing, continuing to run it for quite a long time. He sold to Frank R. Gammon, who was a former resident of this place for many years. At the closing of the sale Mr. Morse was relieved after 43 years constant labor. The next opening was under the firm of A. A. Bennett & Co., which ran for a few years before the old John Mackie, whose stay was short.

The next to take a hand in the game was Mr. Corbin of New York. He bought the building, filling it with goods and opening under the name of Corbin & Co., with the Center Hill as manager, closing the doors June 1918. Since then the building has not been occupied except the room where the Post Office is and the room where the telephone office is located.

New Clarence Nichols has gained possession. He has already begun re-modeling and it is expected the old building, in due time, will be an ornament to the place. He has the best wishes of the community that his efforts may be crowned with success.
